Google's Online Operations team is looking for a Search Quality Coordinator to support search quality operations in Europe. Search Quality Coordinators are responsible for investigating low quality sites and the tactics they use. This role provides the opportunity to directly impact the effectiveness of Google search and help connect users with information.

Ideal candidates are passionate about Google and its technology, and are motivated to help improve the quality of Google's search results.

Responsibilities:

- Investigate and analyze search quality issues in Google's European indexes.
- Improve the quality of Google's search results by reviewing websites for quality and content.
- Enforce compliance with Google's Webmaster Guidelines.
- Cooperate with engineering teams to improve our search quality.
- Understand, develop and share practices for search quality investigation and analysis.
- Perform competitive analysis.
- Troubleshoot and escalate technical problems.
- Work cooperatively in an international team.
- Opportunities to work on special projects, as needed.

Requirements:

- Undergraduate education from top-tier University with strong results.
- Outstanding English communication skills.
- Proven track record of exceptional performance, high productivity and meeting deadlines.
- Ability to execute successfully in a fast-paced, constantly evolving environment.
- Excellent web research and analytical skills.
- Strong computer applications skills.
- Ability to work proactively with team members.
- Detail oriented; ability to complete large volume of work quickly.
- Team player with flexibility, high energy, and a sense of humour.
- Passion for the Internet and familiarity with typical web practices.

HTML experience/programming skills and background in Internet industry would be a plus.
